

Focus on global exposure to prepare future-ready citizens

View of the school

In an endeavour to empower students with a progressive learning environment, GD Goenka Public School, Sarita Vihar, is inviting applications for the new academic session. The school's management says, "We nurture a learning environment that equips every student—from Preschool to Grade XII—with a global outlook and an international edge. The school believes that education in the 21st century must transcend borders; therefore, global exposure is woven naturally into the curriculum through collaborative projects, cultural immersion, and international exchanges. This commitment to internationalism has earned the school the prestigious International School Award, along with remarkable achievements at global platforms in Malaysia, Beijing, Yale University, and schools in Maryland, USA."

According to the team, the school grows with the belief of Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam—the world is one family. They say, "Even the youngest learners begin by exploring the customs, greetings, food, and symbols of nations like

"Global exposure is woven naturally into the curriculum through collaborative projects and international exchanges," says the school's management

Bhutan and Thailand, building early respect for cultural diversity. This academic year students of Grades 1 and 2 deepen this exposure through digital collaborations with peers in Russia, studying the "Dips and Sips" of Russia and Greece and learning traditional dances through interactive sessions."

In Grades 3 and 4, music becomes a bridge across borders as the students partner with children in Saudi Arabia and Japan to celebrate global musical heritage, notes the team. "Environmental studies broaden perspectives further as students compare environmental conditions in China, Russia, Poland, and Kenya, nurturing responsibility towards the planet. Artistic horizons expand as learners explore and contrast the art forms of India with those of South Africa and New Zealand."

As per the team, sports and fitness also hold an international dimension. The management further adds, "Students examine sporting cultures and training practices in countries like the USA and Japan. Parents seeking a school that blends academic excellence with global exposure, cultural understanding, and holistic development will find an ideal choice here. At our school, every child grows into a confident, informed, and compassionate global citizen—prepared for a world without boundaries."

